Take Precautions when Sharing Information

SITUATION OVERVIEW

This information is being shared for your situational awareness.

Over the last several weeks, SCN has been monitoring an increase in anti-Semitic incidents, and in particular, hate speech perpetrated by white supremacist and neo-Nazi extremist groups here in the U.S. In recent events some domestic groups have taken to attacking members of the Jewish community online personally, calling on others to harass or “troll” the individuals posted, publishing their photos and personal contact information. Using tactics we have not seen before, the hate groups are identifying the children of community members and posting their pictures on their website.

In light of these incidents, SCN recommends that all leadership and members of the community review and assess their online profile, including that of their organization, for personally identifiable information of their members and to follow the suggested guidelines below. With the prevalence of social media on the internet today, all individuals and organizations need to be cognizant of what personal information is available online, where it is located, and who has access to that information.

SECURITY RECOMMENDATIONS

Limit the amount of personal information you post.

Do not post information that would make you vulnerable, such as your address or information about your schedule or routine. If your connections post information about you, make sure the combined information is not more than you would be comfortable with strangers knowing. Also be considerate when posting information, including photos, about your connections.

Remember that the Internet is a public resource

Only post information you are comfortable with anyone seeing. This includes information and photos in your profile and in blogs and other forums. Also, once you post information online, you can't retract it. Even if you remove the information from a site, saved or cached versions may still exist on other people's machines.

Be wary of strangers

The Internet makes it easy for people to misrepresent their identities and motives. Consider limiting the people who are allowed to contact you on these sites. If you interact with people you do not know, be cautious about the amount of information you reveal or agreeing to meet them in person.

Be skeptical

Don't believe everything you read online. People may post false or misleading information about various topics, including their own identities. This is not necessarily done with malicious intent; it could be unintentional, an exaggeration, or a joke. Take appropriate precautions, though, and try to verify the authenticity of any information before taking any action.

Evaluate your settings

Take advantage of a site's privacy settings. The default settings for some sites may allow anyone to see your profile, but you can customize your settings to restrict access to only certain people. There is still a risk that private information could be exposed despite these restrictions, so don't post anything that you wouldn't want the public to see. Sites may change their options periodically, so review your security and privacy settings regularly to make sure that your choices are still appropriate.

Take Precautions when Sharing Information

Be wary of third-party applications

Third-party applications may provide entertainment or functionality, but use caution when deciding which applications to enable. Avoid applications that seem suspicious, and modify your settings to limit the amount of information the applications can access. Users could have accounts and not even be aware that a hack affects them as in the case of fantasy sports users unaware that the account they use for that service is in fact a Yahoo account.

Turn on multi-factor authentication

If a service offers added security features like multi factor authentication, turn them on. When you enter your password, you will receive a message, usually via text, with a one-time code that you must enter before you can log in. Most banking sites and popular sites like Google, Apple, Twitter and Facebook offer two-factor authentication, and will ask for a second one-time code anytime you log in from a new computer.

Change your passwords again

Yes, you need to change passwords again and they have to be passwords you have never used before. They need to be long and not words you would find in a dictionary. The first thing hackers do when trying to break into a site is use computer programs that can test every word in the dictionary. Password managers like LastPass or Password Safe create long, unique passwords for the websites you visit and store them in a database that is protected by a master password you have memorized. It may sound counterintuitive, but the truly paranoid write down their passwords. Use stronger, longer passwords for sites that contain the most critical information, like bank or email accounts.

Security questions won't protect your data

Sites will often use security questions like "What was the name of your first school?" or "What is your mother's maiden name?" to recover a user's account if the password is forgotten. These questions are problematic because the internet has made public record searches simple and the answers are usually easy to guess. In a recent study, security researchers at Google found that with a single guess, an attacker would have a 19.7 percent chance of duplicating an English-speaking user's answer to the question, "What is your favorite food?" (It was pizza.)

Perform basic "cyber-hygiene" on all devices

Keep your operating system and all software applications updated.

Download antivirus/antispyware software and set it to update automatically.

Confirm that your firewall is enabled and configured to a secure setting.

Secure your home Wi-Fi signal with a strong password.

Remove any unnecessary software/apps and avoid downloading apps from untrusted sources.

Message from Cantor Socolof

There are certain things that seem to be common across all human societies. This includes such items as music and smiles. Yet another constant among our species is ritual.

What is a ritual? The Cambridge Dictionary defines it as a set of actions or words performed in a regular way. Thus, ritual encompasses a very wide range of actions, from the precise protocol for greeting a head of state to how one attends to one's morning grooming routine. Many rituals, especially religious ones, have a communal component. They exist to reinforce the community.

Judaism has its fair share of rituals. In instances from birth to death, I have seen people comforted by having a prescribed set of actions to take to help them get through times of joy as well as sorrow. They often serve as a scaffolding upon which we can build our response to life events. One of the things I have found interesting over the years is how I can never predict which rituals a particular person will consider merely quaint, and which ones will be replete with meaning.

One of the things that differentiates Jewish ritual from other religious or secular practices is the emphasis on kavannah: intent. One of the functions of halachah is to get us to live, as the current expression goes, mindfully. We are encouraged to pay attention to what we do, as well as to consider its possible ramifications for us and others. Our every action should be taken purposefully. We can do better than to spend our lives simply satiating our appetites.

For example: because we say a blessing before we eat and thank God for our food afterwards, we are led to consider what we are eating, how it was produced and what it took for it to get to us. That's not to mention kashrut and the dimension of mindfulness it engenders. Consequently, eating is not merely fueling the machine. It becomes an opportunity for contemplation on life, the natural order, how our food is sourced and prepared, and so much more. A common, if necessary, activity is taken to a different level, and as a result our lives are enriched.

The Cambridge dictionary also defines ritual as "...any act done regularly, usually without thinking about it..." In the context of brushing one's teeth or combing one's hair this is not a grave concern. When we are talking about Jewish rituals, the prospect of doing it without thinking about it is, in a way, defeating the whole purpose of the exercise. The Torah tells us "This shall be fringes for you, and when you see it, you will remember all the commandments of the Lord to perform them, and you shall not wander after your hearts and after your eyes after which you are going astray. So that you shall remember and perform all My commandments and you shall be holy to your God." (Numbers 15:39-40) When someone grabs a tallit, throws it on and proceeds to their seat, the problem is not that they didn't say the appropriate blessing (although, of course, they should). The problem is that what is supposed to be an act that leads us to remember and consider the mitzvot as well as our observance of and even dedication to them is discounted to a mere sartorial practice.

What, then is the point of our rituals? They exist to increase our opportunities to experience the Divine Presence. By being fully engaged with every aspect of our existence, we elevate it and increase the holiness in our lives. Each of us has the capacity to fill our lives and our actions with meaning. Each of us can turn a mundane commonplace into an act of worship and wonder. Think about it.

Cantor Kal Socolof

Temple Beth El President's Message

Dear Friends,

Many thanks to the sisterhood members of both congregations, Rita, Julie, Sead and Anthony for taking hours to put together a successful Chanukah dinner. From the sessions of shopping, peeling, grating, frying, to arranging for the caterer and setting the tables to putting the latkes on the plate, it was a community effort. Working together for our members is a goal I hope we accomplished.

In this issue of the Temple Times is a coupon to buy trees for Israel through the Jewish National Fund and Hadassah. I hope you would take the opportunity to celebrate Tu B'Shevat and honor someone in your life. All the monies go to JNF to support forestry in Israel. As you may know, many of the forests have been destroyed by fire in recent months.

A reminder that Cantor Socolof's Lunch and Learn has been rescheduled for April 1st.

Temple's only ongoing fundraiser is gift cards and scrip for groceries. When you use these cards, the participating stores give temple a percentage. Everyone goes shopping, why not use the cards at no cost to you? You can find the list of cards in this issue.

Until the next time,
Marsha

Executive Director's Message

It is unusual to look at our calendar for February and see a minor holiday to be observed in February.

Tu B'shevat, the Hebrew Arbor Day on the 15th of Shevat, is also known as the New Year of the Trees.

Israel observes Tu B'shevat with a beautiful ancient custom. On this holiday a tree is planted for each child born during the year – a cedar for a boy, a cypress for a girl. When the trees mature and the child marries, branches from their tree are used for their chuppah. Trees in our tradition are closely associated with birth and marriage. Our Torah is called "itz chayem", a Tree of Life.

To observe this holiday enjoy fruits and nuts, or other Israeli products, you can also make a donation or purchase a tree from JNF (the Jewish National Fund) or fill a JNF Blue Box.

As we move forward and get used to writing 2017, we continue to pray for our family and friends, our country, our Temple, Israel and the world.

Happy days and good health to all.

Shalom,
Mundy

Temple Beth El Sisterhood

On December 30th Temple Beth El and Temple Emanu El again had the opportunity to share a lovely Hanukkah dinner. As we know, the preparation for this event is a lot of work and ladies from both temples put many hours into the potato Latkes. The room looked lovely and the children had a wonderful time.

I would like to thank the following women (and men) from both of our temples for their help in making our Hanukkah dinner as nice as it was and our latkes so delicious.

- Dori Critelli
- Wendy Davidson
- Andi Dinerstein
- Cecily Eidelhoch
- Rae Feldman
- Judi Goldstone

- Dana Schuyler
- Mundy Shapiro
- Ann Siegel
- Marsha Silverman
- Rachel, Eric and Jordan Smith
- Lynn Tomaino

A very special thank you to the best help ever

- Sead
- Anthony
- Rita

Let us all look forward to celebrating Hanukkah together again next year.

A Happy 2017 to all Shalom, Mundy
